

Opportunities for graduate students (MSc & PhD) and postdoctoral fellows to study cystic fibrosis airway disease pathobiology and the molecular and cellular mechanisms of epithelial transport that may contribute to lung disease.

The applicant will work in a collaborative environment with the clinicians at the Division of Respiriology to pursue high impact research using the unique resources available at the University of Saskatchewan, i.e. synchrotron-based imaging methods, and advanced animal models unique in Canada.