Dr. Marcia Clark

Seeing What We've Learned Not to See: Gender, Culture and Change in Surgery

Marcia Clark, MD, FRCSC, MSc, Dip. Sport Med., ICD.D is a fellowship-trained orthopaedic surgeon, Clinical Professor at the University of Calgary, and President of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada. Her practice focuses on complex joint reconstruction and general orthopaedics, with a strong commitment to patient-centred care. A respected physician leader, educator, and mentor, Dr. Clark has contributed extensively to medical education, accreditation, governance, and health system leadership. Her academic and research interests include surgical education, perioperative outcomes, patient experience, gender equity in surgery, and sustainable health care. Dr. Clark is passionate about advancing inclusive leadership, physician well-being, and innovation in health care, including the responsible integration of artificial intelligence.

Outside of medicine, she enjoys alpine skiing, hiking, biking, and spending time outdoors.
